

Amira

1982nd Curator of the Museum of Brave and Curious

Amira found that there were wonders upon wonders even in the tiniest and humblest of things.
She founded the museum of dust.

Museum of Dust

Amira would take pieces of sticky tape and spend exactly twenty minutes finding dust in as many odd places as she could.

She would place each piece into a bag and add a label that told where it had been found.

She would often invite friends to come looking for dust with her.

When the bags of dust had been collected she would display them together, curate them into a museum, and occasionally she would take people on a guided tour.
